

International Transformational Resilience Coalition

A serious environmental, turned mental health, turned social crisis is growing that has yet to be acknowledged: the harmful impacts of climate change on individual and community psychological, emotional, and social wellbeing.

Leaders from all sectors of society must become aware of the growing crisis.

And, policies must be adopted and educational programs developed to help individuals and groups learn skills to cope with climate impacts and use them as catalysts to enhance both personal and collective wellbeing.

The International Transformational Resilience Coalition (ITRC), a collaboration of over 160 mental health, resilience building, and mindfulness professionals from the U.S. and across the world, is directly addressing these needs.
